

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A physical vapor deposition process for maintaining the wafer below a critical temperature. The rate at which material particles are sputtered from the target and thus deposited on the wafer is controllable in response to power supplied to the target. Maintaining a desired deposition rate maintains the wafer temperature below the critical temperature.